Poet Voices has long been recognized for its distinctive voice and meaningful contribution to Southern Gospel music. The group was formed in the early 1990s by a young songwriter named Phil Cross, who, though already enjoying success, was writing far more material than the popular groups of the day could record. Seeking an outlet for those songs and a platform where the message could be presented exactly as written, Cross formed Poet Voices, a name that reflected both the lyrical depth of the songs and the collective voices bringing them to life. Today, Poet Voices continues its journey with renewed focus and purpose. The group is now comprised of Phil Cross, Donny Henderson on lead, Loren Harris on baritone, Jeff Snyder on tenor, and K.C. Armstrong on bass.
